President's Welcome

Our theme for 2020 is Disruptors and Innovators.

When we discussed our theme back in late 2019, none of us could have foreseen the circumstances that were to unfold this year. Yet looking at examples of services and initiatives across our Library community, that theme holds true for this year's conference.

Scotland's libraries have led the way in delivering innovative virtual services over the past 6 months. It's obvious how much our physical spaces were missed and how valued libraries are across communities, schools, universities and health settings.

Of course, it's disappointing that we're unable to meet and network physically as we have done so successfully in past years.

However, the programme for our online conference will showcase and demonstrate fantastic examples of innovation across the sector, looking to the future, and reflecting on best practice. I hope the programme will empower you and give you the confidence to embrace new challenges in an environment that changes so quickly.

Please do take the opportunity to share, network and talk to colleagues across the country, reminding ourselves we are always connected.

I would like to pay tribute to the amazing CILIPS team who have ensured our profile and spirits have remained buoyant in a time of concern and anxiety, and who have delivered vibrant learning opportunities for CILIP members.

The CILIPS team and the wider library and information community have put together a fantastic virtual programme which I am delighted to introduce.

This is a very different conference, but I hope it will be uplifting, positive and forward looking.

Stay safe and well and hope you get as much as possible from #CILIPS20

Martina McChrystal
